More than 1 in 5 uninsured adults with an opioid addiction have a serious mental illness.

Nationally, uninsured adults are less likely to have received treatment for addiction than those covered by Medicaid, and drug addiction is the leading cause of accidental death in the U.S.

In Wyoming, nearly 25,000 people have a serious mental illness, including schizophrenia, bipolar disorder or depression. These conditions often impact a person’s ability to communicate with others, take care of themselves, and understand the world around them.

By 2015, over 2 million people were addicted to prescription opioids and 591,000 people were addicted to heroin. In Wyoming, an estimated 96 people lost their lives to drug overdoses.

Social Security Income (SSI) and Social Security Disability Income (SSDI) Limits

People diagnosed with a serious mental illness often qualify for Medicaid through the Social Security program. Individuals who qualify for SSDI Income for 2017 earn $14,040 per year, and those who qualify for SSI income earn $8,820 per year, with Wyoming providing some supplemental income. SSDI and SSI are only provided to individuals who cannot work due to a medical condition or injury, and the federal government restricts these individuals from receiving any additional income. Individuals with addiction disorders cannot qualify for SSDI.

Many states have increased cost-sharing requirements for Medicaid recipients. Cost sharing can include copayments, cost-sharing and monthly premiums.

For people with significant health care needs and who are living in poverty, cost-sharing can prevent access to effective and essential services.

After increasing cost-sharing in Oregon and Wisconsin, significant numbers of people left the health care program and resorted to the emergency room for care. Further, the administrative costs of the program may exceed the funds received from enrollees.
