CHALLENGING MATH FOR PEOPLE LIVING WITH DISABLING MENTAL ILLNESS AND SUBSTANCE USE DISORDERS
Serious Mental Illness and Substance Use Disorders

More than 1 in 5 uninsured adults with an opioid addiction have a serious mental illness.

Nationally, uninsured adults are less likely to have received treatment for addiction than those covered by Medicaid, and drug addiction is the leading cause of accidental death in the U.S.

In South Dakota, over 33,000 people have a serious mental illness, including schizophrenia, bipolar disorder or depression. These conditions often impact a person’s ability to communicate with others, take care of themselves, and understand the world around them.

By 2015, over 2 million people were addicted to prescription opioids and 591,000 people were addicted to heroin. In South Dakota, 65 people lost their lives to drug overdoses.

Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI)

People diagnosed with a serious mental illness often qualify for Medicaid through their eligibility for Social Security disability benefits. Individuals who qualify for SSDI receive on average $13,578 per year, and those who qualify for SSI receive up to $8,820 per year. SSDI and SSI are provided to individuals who cannot work due to a serious medical or mental illness, condition, or injury. In most states, eligibility for SSI confers eligibility for Medicaid. Generally, SSDI recipients are eligible for Medicare after two years, but may also qualify for Medicaid.
